Notes for Sir John FOWLER KCMG

FOWLER, SIR JOHN (1817-1898), English civil engineer, was born on the 15th of July 1817 at Wadsley Hall, near Sheffield, where his father was a land-surveyor. At the age of sixteen he became a pupil of John Towleron Leather, the engineer of the Sheffield water-works. The latter's uncle, George Leather, was engineer of the Great Aire and Calder Navigation Company, of the Goole Docks, and other similar works, and Fowler passed occasionally into his employment, in which he acquired a thorough knowledge of hydraulic engineering. The era of railway construction soon swept both Fowler and his employers into its service, and one of his first employments was to oppose the route of the Midland railway, chosen by the Stephensons, which left Sheffield on a branch line, and was therefore strongly resented by the inhabitants. The prestige of the Stephensons carried all before it, but in later life Sir John Fowler had the satisfaction of seeing the opposition of his clients justified, and Sheffield placed on the main line. In 1838 he went into the office of John Urpeth Rastrick, one of the leading railway engineers of the day, where he was employed in designing bridges for the line from London to Brighton, and also in surveying for railways in Lancashire. In 1839 he went as representative of Mr Leather to take charge of the construction of the Stockton & Hartlepool railway and remained as manager of the line after it was finished.

In 1844 he began his independent career as an engineer, and from the first was largely employed, more particularly in laying out the small railway systems, which eventually were amalgamated under the title of the Manchester, Sheffield & Lincolnshire. In the course of this work he designed a bridge known as Torksey Bridge, which was disallowed by the Board of Trade inspector, Captain (afterwards Field-Marshal Sir) Lintern Simmons. The engineering profession espoused Fowler's side in the controversy, which followed, and as a result the verdict of the Board of Trade was modified. The episode was the beginning of a warm friendship between these distinguished representatives of civil and military engineering. Fowler was engineer of the London Metropolitan railway, the pioneer of underground railways, and noteworthy in that it was mostly made not by tunnelling, but by excavating from the surface and then covering in the permanent way; and he lived to be one of the engineers officially connected with the deep tunnelling "tube" system extensively adopted for electric railways in London. He was also engaged in the making of railways in Ireland, and in 1867 he was selected by Disraeli to serve on a commission to advise the government in respect of a proposal for a state-purchase of the Irish railway system. He also carried out considerable works in relation to the Nene Valley drainage and the reclamation of land at the Norfolk estuary.

In 1865 he was elected president of the Institution of Civil Engineers, the youngest president who had ever sat in the chair. He was strongly opposed to the project of a Channel tunnel to France, and in 1872 he endeavoured to obtain the consent of parliament to a Channel ferry scheme, whereby trains were to be transported across the strait in large ferry steamers. The proposal involved the making of enlarged harbours at Dover and Audresselles on the French coast, and the bill, after passing the Commons, was thrown out by the casting vote of the chairman of a committee of the House of Lords. In 1875 he was enabled to render, in his private capacity, a signal service to the Italian government, which was much embarrassed by impracticable proposals pressed on it by Garibaldi for a rectification of the course of the Tiber and other engineering works. He had several interviews with the Italian patriot, and persuaded him of the impracticable nature of his plan, thereby obtaining for the government leisure to devise a more reasonable scheme.

For eight years from 1871 he acted as general engineering adviser in Egypt to the Khedive Ismail. He projected a railway to the Sudan, and also the reparation of the barrage. These and many other plans came to an end owing to financial reasons. But the maps and surveys for the railway were given to the war office, and proved most useful to Lord Wolseley in his Nile expedition. For his service Fowler was made K.C.M.G. (1885). He was created a baronet in 1890 on the completion of the Forth bridge; of which with his partner Sir Benjamin Baker he was joint engineer. He died at Bournemouth on the 11th of November 1898.

The Ullapool Village Clock

Says Nov 20th
Two pages ago

The Ullapool clock is said to be the most photographed clock in the Highlands, when you see it you can't help but realise why. All four pediment faces' are decorated with a crown, at the top is an urn with the leafy finial holds a weather vane, the base of the pedestal carries four inscriptions. The quite handsome square cast iron memorial clock now stands in Quay Street and is also known as the "Fowler Memorial Clock". A London Firm Dent & Co made the clock mechanism.

In 1899 the Clock was erected in the middle of the road between the Caledonian Hotel, the corner of Quay Street and Argyle Street. The clock was in memory of the sons and grandsons of Sir John Fowler of Braemore who were killed in action.

Sir John lived with his family at Braemore House at Braemore Junction near Corrieshalloch Gorge. Sir John was a Chief Engineer born in Sheffield in 1817. He was responsible for many railways most notably the Metropolitan underground railway, as well as being responsible for the design of the Forth Railway Bridge.

In 1922 the Fowler family presented the clock to the village along with £100 for its upkeep. Due to District Council complaints that the clock was causing traffic congestion it was decided that the clock should be moved to its new present position, this happened in the middle of the sixties. Up until 1995 local butcher Sandy Ross wound the clock by hand. Lochbroom Community Council decided to fundraise for the money needed to modernize the clock so that it ran by electricity, along with the many donations made by local businesses and people, a Highland Regional Council grant and the Scottish Hydro Electric it was made possible. Many local workmen worked for free to get the clock ticking all by itself.

Notes for Sir John FOWLER KCMG

FOWLER, SIR JOHN (1817-1898) English civil engineer, was born on the 15th of July 1817 at Wadsley Hall, near Sheffield, where his father was a land-surveyor. At the age of sixteen he became a pupil of John Towler, the engineer of the Sheffield water-works. The latter's uncle, George Leather, was engineer of the Great Aire and Calder Navigation Company, of the Goolo Docks, and other similar works, and Fowler passed occasionally into his employment, in which he acquired a thorough knowledge of hydraulic engineering. The era of railway construction soon swept both Fowler and his employers into its service, and one of his first employments was to oppose the route of the Midland railway, chosen by the Stephensons, which left Sheffield on a branch line, and was therefore strongly resented by the inhabitants. The prestige of the Stephensons carried all before it, but in later life Sir John Fowler had the satisfaction of seeing the opposition of his clients justified, and Sheffield placed on the main line. In 1838 he went into the office of John Urpeth Rastrick, one of the leading railway engineers of the day, where he was employed in designing bridges for the line from London to Brighton, and also in surveying for railways in Lancashire. In 1839 he went as representative of Mr Leather to take charge of the construction of the Stockton & Hartlepool railway and remained as manager of the line after it was finished. In 1844 he began his independent career as an engineer, and from the first was largely employed, more particularly in laying out the small railway systems which eventually were amalgamated under the title of the Manchester, Sheffield & Lincolnshire. In the course of this work he designed a bridge known as Torksey Bridge, which was disallowed by the Board of Trade inspector, Captain (afterwards Field-Marshal Sir) Linton Simmons. The engineering profession espoused Fowler's side in the controversy which followed, and as a result the verdict of the Board of Trade was modified. This episode was the beginning of a warm friendship between these distinguished representatives of civil and military engineering. Fowler was engineer of the London Metropolitan railway, the pioneer of underground railways, and noteworthy in that it was mostly made not by tunnelling, but by excavating from the surface and then covering in the permanent way; and he lived to be one of the engineers officially connected with the deep tunnelling "tube" system extensively adopted for electric railways in London. He was also engaged in the making of railways in Ireland, and in 1867 he was selected by Disraeli to serve on a commission to advise the government in respect of a proposal for a state-purchase of the Irish railway system. He also carried out considerable works in relation to the Nene Valley-drainage and the reclamation of land at the Norfolk estuary.

In 1865 he was elected president of the Institution of Civil Engineers, the youngest president who had ever sat in the chair. He was strongly opposed to the project of a Channel tunnel to France, and in 1872 he endeavoured to obtain the consent of parliament to a Channel Ferry scheme, whereby trains were to be transported across the strait in large ferry steamers. The proposal involved the making of enlarged harbours at Dover and Andresselles on the French coast, and the bill, after passing the Commons, was thrown out by the casting vote of the chairman of a committee of the House of Lords. In 1875 he was enabled to render, in his private capacity, a signal service to the Italian government, which was much embarrassed by impracticable proposals pressed on it by Garibaldi for a rectification of the course of the Tiber and other engineering works. He had several interviews with the Italian patriot, and persuaded him of the impracticable nature of his plan, thereby obtaining for the government leisure to devise a more reasonable scheme.

Aha —
The Tube

For eight years from 1871 he acted as general engineering adviser in Egypt to the Khedive Ismail. He projected a railway to the Sudan, and also the reparation of the barrage. These and many other plans came to an end owing to financial reasons. But the maps and surveys for the railway were given to the war office, and proved most useful to Lord Wolseley in his Nile expedition. For his service Fowler was made K.C.M.G. (1885). He was created a baronet in 1890 on the completion of the Forth bridge, of which with his partner Sir Benjamin Baker he was joint engineer. He died at Bournemouth on the 11th of November 1898.

finial holds a weathervane, the base of the pedestal carries four inscriptions. The quite handsome square cast iron memorial clock now stands in Quay Street and is also known as the "Fowler Memorial Clock". A London Firm Dent & Co made the clock mechanism.

In 1899 the Clock was erected in the middle of the road between the Caledonian Hotel, the corner of Quay Street and Argyle Street. The clock was in memory of the sons and grandsons of Sir John Fowler of Braemore who were killed in action.

Sir John lived with his family at Braemore House at Braemore Junction near Carsehallock Gorge. Sir John was a Chief Engineer born in Sheffield in 1817. He was responsible for many railways most notably the Metropolitan underground railway, as well as being responsible for the design of the Porth Railway Bridge.

In 1922 the Fowler family presented the clock to the village along with £100 for its upkeep. Due to District Council complaints that the clock was causing traffic congestion it was decided that the clock should be moved to its new present position, this happened in the middle of the sixties. Up until 1995 local butcher Sandy Ross wound the clock by hand. Lockbroon Community Council decided to fundraise for the money needed to modernize the clock so that it ran by electricity, along with the many donations made by local businesses and people, a Highland Regional Council grant and the Scottish Hydro Electric it was made possible. Many local workmen worked for free to get the clock ticking all by itself.

DERBYSHIRE TIMES. SAT

MR. H. A. FOWLER, J.P.Death of Well-known Derbyshire Magistrate and Sportsman.

It is with sincere regret that we have this week to record the death of Mr. H. A. Fowler, J.P., who passed away at his residence, Woodthorpe Hall, on Wednesday morning, at the age of 76 years.

Mr. Fowler had been in failing health for the past two years, but it was not until quite recently that his strength became still further impaired, and he passed peacefully away as stated. He leaves a widow and family, to whom the sympathy of a very wide circle of friends will be extended.

Mr. Fowler was married twice, his first wife, who was Miss Isobel Nesfield, died in 1885, and his second wife, who survives him, is a daughter of the late Dr. Spencer-Torrop. He had four sons and four daughters (one daughter died quite young) by his first wife, and three daughters by his second.

Mr. Fowler, who was born at Woodside, near Sheffield, was a son of the late Mr. Wm. Fowler, of Whitlington Hall, the founder of the Sheepbridge Coal and Iron Co. Mr. Fowler's grandfather, who was born at Wadsley Hall, near Sheffield, in 1820, was the celebrated engineer. It was in 1856, that Mr. Wm. Fowler purchased the site of the Sheepbridge Works, and in connection with his brother, Mr. John Fowler, took on lease large areas of minerals from the Duke of Devonshire and Rutland, and from the trustees of the Dunstone Estate. Active steps were taken to develop the mineral property thus acquired. A branch railway was made from the Midland main line to Sheepbridge, and afterwards this was extended some miles beyond that place. Blast furnaces and other works were erected, and shafts were sunk to open out the coal and iron resources of the neighbourhood. Mr. Arthur Hanky, banker, subsequently joined Messrs. Fowler, and the works were then greatly extended and were successfully carried on under the active management of Mr. Wm. Fowler. In 1864 the entire undertaking was sold to a limited company, now well known as the Sheepbridge Coal and Iron Co. Mr. Wm. Fowler,

Mr. Wm. Fowler contributed largely to the building of the new church at Old Whittington in place of the decayed old edifice previously there. Mr. Fowler also took an active part in the establishment of the Chesterfield Hospital, and contributed largely to all local charities. As an instance of the general opinion in which Mr. Fowler was held by the people of Derbyshire and of his popularity in this division of the county, we may mention that, although defeated at the general election of 1885, he received no less than 2,087 votes, being 60 votes in excess of the defeated Liberal candidate. Mr. Fowler was buried in the family vault at Ecclesfield, where are interred several of Mr. Fowler's ancestors, to whose memory stained glass windows are erected in the church.

Mr. Fowler was a nephew of the late Sir John Fowler, who was knighted for his services as engineer with Sir Benjamin Baker of the Forth Bridge.

As a boy Mr. Fowler was sent to Woodston Vicarage, Leicestershire, to receive private tuition, and later went to Oxford University, where he took his M.A. He started on a trip round the world, and visited, among other places, North and South America and The Rockies, but an attack of diphtheria put short his trip and he returned home. A year later he went to India on a shooting expedition.

Mr. H. A. Fowler was particularly well known and highly esteemed, and during his residence at Southgate House, near Barbboro', he devoted a good deal of time to public work. He took up residence at Woodthorpe Hall in 1901, where he had lived a quiet life. He was, however, a keen sportsman, and in addition to being an enthusiastic rider to hounds, was considered to be one of the best sporting shots in Derbyshire. Mr. Fowler was one of the oldest Magistrates in Derbyshire, and had been chairman of the Eckington Bench for a long period of years. He was also a member of the Standing Joint Committee for Derbyshire for many years, and only severed his connection with that body about a year ago. Mr. Fowler was a great friend of the late Mr. Charles Markham, and before he died remarked: "Poor old Charlie did not have so long to think about it as I have."

One of Mr. Fowler's daughters is Mrs. Bird, wife of Mr. L. D. Bird, a director of the Chesterfield Brewery Co. Other daughters are Mrs. Butcher, wife of Mr. F. J. Butcher, Cuthbert Hall, and Mrs. J. H. W. Jendine. Mr. Edward Fowler, the eldest son, is in South Africa.

Mr. Cecil Fowler, the second son, is well known in the Staveley and Barbboro' districts, and held for a number of years an appointment at Coventry in connection with Mr. A. B. Markham's collieries in Warwickshire. He is now associated with the selling organisation of the Markham group of collieries in South Yorkshire, and his younger brother, Lieut.-Col. Geoffrey Fowler, who commands the West Riding Artillery Territorial unit, is connected with Thorne Colliery Company. Both these brothers served with distinction in the war. Mr. Ronald Fowler, another son, is a departmental manager at Staveley Works. The funeral will take place at Whitwell to-day (Saturday) at 2.30 p.m.

SATURDAY. MAY 12

MR. H. A. FOWLERRemains interred at Whitwell.

There were widespread tokens of sympathy and respect at the funeral which took place in the old burial ground at Whitwell on Saturday of Mr. Harry Alfred Fowler, M.A., J.P., Woodthorpe Hall, well-known Derbyshire magistrate and sportsman, whose death was chronicled in our last issue.

It is many years since Mr. Fowler and his family resided at Soutgate House, Clowne, but amongst the large and representative gathering which assembled for the last sad rites were many of the older residents in the Clowne, Whitwell and Barboro' area, who recalled with feelings akin to pride the kindly smile, the honest hand-shake and the neighbourly solicitude of the deceased. Mr. Fowler was persona grata with all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance, however humble his or her station, and those who foregathered to pay their last tribute of respect did so with the feeling that his passing had severed yet another link with that fast disappearing type of a "fine old English gentleman" of which Mr. Fowler was so excellent a counterpart.

The funeral attracted many old friends and acquaintances from all parts of the district, including the veteran Sir Josiah Court. Local police were on duty outside the Church, under the personal supervision of Divisional Supt. Clarke, of Renishaw, with whom was Police Sgt. George, of Clowne, while the following members of the constabulary, under Inspector Fox, Staveley, and Sgt. Longden, Crewewell, acted as bearers—Constables Hearnshaw, Walker, Weaver, Nash, Stone and Tweed.

Inside the Church, during the period of waiting, the organist, Mr. Aubrey Pitchford, played suitable selections from Spohr, Greig and Guilmant. The tolling of the bell indicated the approach of the cortege, and presently, to the inspiring words of Hope, "I know that My Redeemer liveth," the coffin, preceded by the clergy and surpliced choir, was carried into the Church, followed by the widow and members of the family. The Rector, the Ven. Archdeacon Crosse, and the Vicar of Barlow, the Rev. E. W. Lumley, conducted the service. It opened with the singing of the hymn "Our Blest Redemer," and following the chanting of the 90th Psalm, "Lord Thou Hast Been Our Refuge" and the reading of the lesson, the hymns "Peace, Perfect Peace" and "On the Resurrection Morning" were sung, the service closing with the beautiful strains of Chopin's "March Funebre." The remains of the deceased were laid to rest beside those of his first wife in the family grave, which lies to the north-west of the old Church. The committal sentences were read by the Rev. E. W. Lumley and the Archdeacon pronounced the Benediction.

THE MOURNERS.

The mourners were the widow, Miss Torrop (sister-in-law), Major and Mrs. Cecil Fowler, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Fowler, Lieut.-Col. and Mrs. Geoffrey Fowler (sons and daughters-in-law), Mr. and Mrs. Lionel D. Bird (daughter and son-in-law), Mrs. Jeudwine and Miss Jeudwine (daughter and granddaughter), Mr. and Mrs. Fred Butcher and Miss Butcher (son-in-law and daughter and granddaughter), Mrs. Edward Fowler (daughter-in-law), the Misses Fowler, Oakland House, Sheffield (cousins), and Mrs. Angus Campbell (cousin).

Amongst others present were Mr. James Fifth, Mr. Harry Price and Mr. Vernon Price, London, Col. J. E. Butler-Bowdon, J.P., Mr. J. L. Butler-Bowdon, J.P., Ald. E. C. Barnes, chairman of the Chesterfield Royal Hospital Committee, Mr. A. T. H. Barnes, Mr. E. Edmund Barnes, Mr. H. A. Sanders, Mr. T. B. Springett, Dr. Tonks, Sir Joshua Court, Mr. M. H. Humble, Col. MAGISTERIAL TRIBUTE

Before the Chesterfield County magistrates began the business of the Court on Saturday, Sir Ernest Shentall, the presiding magistrate, made sympathetic reference to the death of Mr. Fowler, and sympathy with the relatives was expressed by the magistrates, officials and public standing

Sir Ernest pointed out that Mr. Fowler had been a magistrate for 35 years and was, therefore, the oldest magistrate in that district. He was sure everyone who knew him would have great respect for his memory. Mr. Fowler, owing to deafness, had not taken a very prominent part in the work of that Court for some years, but when he did all everyone whose duty brought them to that Court respected his judgment and ability. Sir Ernest added that Mr. Fowler was the third magistrate they had lost within a very short time.

Sept. Stone remarked that he was connected with Mr. Fowler at Eckington 32 years ago, when he (the Superintendent) was a very young officer. He had always received every consideration and courtesy from Mr. Fowler.

ON RESIDENTS

MARRIAGE OF MISS M. S. TORROP.

A quiet marriage of much interest to many residents in Heywood was solemnised last week at the Prestwich Parish Church, the bride being Miss Margaret Spens Torrop, youngest daughter of Mrs. Torrop of Prestwich Park, and the late Dr. Torrop, J.P., of Sandon House, Heywood, and the bridegroom Mr. Harry Adam Fowler, J.P., of Woodthorpe Hall, Aldam, Derbyshire. The Rev. F. Catwood Dearden, M.A., vicar of St. Michael's, Bamford, was the officiating clergyman.

The bride, who wore a gown of grey velvet, with tricorn hat, was given away by her uncle, Dr. Pilkington of Salford. She was accompanied by three maids—her sister, Miss Katherine Spens Torrop, and her nieces, the Misses Guenda and Peggy Dearden. Miss Torrop wore a strawberry pink gown with grey hat, and the Misses Dearden were in white silk, with white silk bonnets. Mr. Ronald Fowler was the best man.

HYMN.

On the Resurrection morning
 Soul and body meet again;
 No more sorrow, no more weeping,
 no more pain!

Here awhile they must be parted,
 And the flesh its Sabbath keep,
 Waiting in a holy stillness,
 wrapt in sleep.

For a while the tired body
 Lies with feet toward the morn;
 Till the last and brightest Easter day be born.

But the soul in contemplation
 Utters earnest prayer and strong,
 Bursting at the Resurrection into song.

Soul and body reunited
 Thenceforth nothing shall divide,
 Walking up in Christ's own likeness, satisfied.

Oh! the beauty, Oh! the gladness
 Of that Resurrection day,
 Which shall not through endless ages pass away!

On that happy Easter morning
 All the graves their dead restore;
 Father, sister, child, and mother,
 Meet once more.

To that brightest of all meetings
 Bring us, Jesu Christ, at last;
 By Thy Cross, through death and judgment,
 holding fast. Amen.

HYMN.

Our Blest Redeemer, ere He breathed
His tender last farewell,
A Guide, a Comforter, beneath'd
With us to dwell.

He came sweet influence to impart,
A gracious willing Guest,
While He can find one humble heart
Wherein to rest,

And His that gentle voice we hear,
Soft as the breath of even.

That checks each fault, that calms each fear,
And speaks of Hen'ry.

And every virtue we possess,
And every conquest won,
And every thought of baseness,
Are His alone.

Spirit of purity and grace,

Our weakness, pitying, see;
O make our hearts Thy dwelling-place,
And wortier Thee. Amen.

PSALM XC.

Lord, Thou hast been our refuge : from one generation to another.
Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever the earth and the world were made : Thou art God from everlasting, and world without end.

Thou turnest man to destruction : again Thou sayest, Come again, ye children of men.
For a thousand years in Thy sight are but as yesterday : seeing that is past as a watch in the night.

As soon as Thou scatterest them, they are even as a sleep : and fade away suddenly like the grass.
In the morning it is green, and groweth up : but in the evening it is cut down, dried up, and withered.

For we consume away in Thy displeasure : and are afraid at Thy wrathful indignation.
Thou hast set our misdeeds before Thee ; and our secrets sins in the sight of Thy countenance.

For when Thou art angry all our days are gone : we bring our years to an end, as it were a tale that is told.
The days of our age are threescore years and ten ; and though men be so strong, that they come to fourscore years : yet is their strength then fail labour and sorrow : so soon passeth it away, and we are gone.
But who regardeth the power of Thy wrath : for even there after as a man feareth, so is Thy displeasure.
So teach us to number our days : that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.

Turn Thee again, O Lord, at the last : and be gracious unto Thy servants.
O satisfy us with Thy mercy, and that soon : so shall we rejoice and be glad all the days of our life.
Comfort us again now after the time that Thou has plagued us : and for the years wherein we have suffered adversity, Shew Thy servants Thy work ; and their children Thy glory.
And the glorious Majesty of the Lord our God be upon us : prosper Thou the work of our hands upon us, O prosper Thou our handi-work.
Glory be to the Father, and to the Son : and to the Holy Ghost : As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be : world without end. Amen.

HYMN.

Peace, perfect peace, in this dark world of sin?
The Blood of Jesus whispers peace within.

Peace, perfect peace, by throning duties press'd ?
To do the will of Jesus, this is rest.

Peace, perfect peace, with sorrows surging round ?
On Jesus' bosom nought but calm is found.

Peace, perfect peace, with loved ones far away?
In Jesus' keeping we are safe and they.

Peace, perfect peace, our future all unknown ?
Jesus we know, and He is on the Throne.

Peace, perfect peace, death shadowing us and ours?
Jesus has vanquish'd death and all its powers.
It is enough : earth's struggles soon shall cease,
And Jesus call us to Heaven's perfect peace. Amen.

6. Southgate House, Clowne

'Southgate House', declares White's Directory of Derbyshire of 1957, 'is a handsome modern mansion facing east ... delightfully situated amidst thriving woods and plantations' which is a some contrast to the situation today, for the depredations of coal mining, land reclamation and modern agricultural techniques have rendered the situation of the house singularly treeless, except in its immediate environs. Today it is a hotel.

Nevertheless, it is a two and a half storey brick house, with stone quoins at the angles of three widely spaced bays on its eastern (entrance) front, the central one breaking forward slightly under a pediment. Below both the entrance and the large roof window are Serlian or Venetian, topped by a tripartite arched window, the central light being slightly bowed up, all within stone surrounds. The remaining lights have segmental brick arches, each centered with a stone keyblock and the side elevations are of four bays, again widely spaced. It should be a design carrying the sort of harmony that Joseph Paxton was wont to achieve, yet somehow the proportions are not quite right. The architect is not known, but may have been Hathersage-born Joseph Badger of Sheffield who worked also at Renishaw and Oakes Park.

To the north (the right of the entrance front) is a single storey link to a hipped roofed building, erected in the 1870s by Charles Aloysius Hansom, inventor of the Hansom cab and an architect with a solid and illustrious Catholic clientele. This was added as the family chapel, dedicated to the Sacred Heart and Our Lady of Victories, and was a reduced version of the one Hansom added to Derwent Hall for the future Lord FitzAlan of Derwent.

The man who built the house was Henry Bowdon (1754-1833) son of John, of Beighton Fields, a modest estate which had come in to the family when another Henry – younger son of Thomas, who was third son of Thomas Bowdon of Bowdon Hall and Whiston-in-Peak – married the sister and heiress of John Hewett of Beighton. This inheritance also included the obscure manor of Harlesthope, in Clowne, on the lands of which Southgate House was actually erected, very close to the parish boundary with Barlborough. The family are first recorded at Bowdon Hall in 1477, and over the years had made alliances with the Brownes of Marsh, Beards of Beard, Bagshawes of Abney, the Poles of (Kirk) Langley and the Bradbournes of The Hough (Hulland).

The builder of the house, Henry, married Mary daughter and heiress of Joseph Erdeswick of Sandon, Staffordshire, and had two sons and two daughters. The elder son, John Peter Bruno Bowdon had three sons and five daughters, and settled Southgate House on his eldest son, Henry (1814-1875), whilst his second son, John, inherited Pleasington Hall in Lancashire from a cousin, Mary Anne Butler, and in 1841 he added her surname before his own and quartered her arms by Royal Sign Manual. Henry dying without issue, he also inherited Southgate House, but from then on it was let, although the family retained ownership until at least the end of World War II. Meanwhile, John Butler-Bowdon's grandson, John Lancelot Wykham Butler-Bowdon (1883-1963), lived at first at nearby Barlborough House, residence of his father and mother. She was the daughter and heiress of A.W. Clifton of Warton Hall, Lancashire, by Lady Bertha Rawdon-Hastings, a sister of the unfortunate 4th Marquess of Hastings, and co-heiress of the Barony of Grey de Ruthin. In 1940, the abeyance of this honour was terminated in J.L.W. Butler-Bowdon's favour, and he thus succeeded as 25th Lord Grey de Ruthin, a barony created by writ of summons to Roger Grey of the Codnor family, in 1324. He died at his house at Pownhope, Herefordshire in 1963, when the title again fell into abeyance, from which it has not subsequently been called.

Southgate House continued with the senior line, the descendants of the elder son of John Butler-Bowdon, also John (1850-1929) and its sale probably goes back to the period following the death of this man's son, Col. William Butler Bowdon DSO. ▶
